1. [redacted] ship picked up the Kara Sea pilot at Murmansk for the trip to Igarka (N 67-28, E 86-35). However, the pilot did not do much actual navigating on the trip. 25X1
2. On the trip to Igarka, [redacted] ship set a course for N 70-00, E 48-00. When the ship was in the vicinity of Kolguyev Island (N 69-05, E 49-15), it received instructions not to sail any closer to the island because of a minefield. However, many large Soviet vessels sail close to the island. 25X1
3. From Kolguyev Island, the ship sailed along the 70th parallel through the Kara Strait. From there a course was set to N 74-00, E 69-00, then to Dikson Island (N 73-30, E 80-20), and finally southward to Oshmarino Point (N 71-44, E 82-58). The minefields in this area are indicated on the sketch on page 3. At Oshmarino Point the two river pilots were taken aboard; they served alternate watches. 25X1
4. On Dikson Island [redacted] a number of watchtowers and radio masts. there was a port on the east side of the bay, because [redacted] a number of small vessels, quays, and cranes in the area. 25X1
5. There were four twin-engined flying boats in the seaplane harbor at Igarka. The aircraft were smaller than those [redacted] anchored in the Kola Inlet. The aircraft were painted dark blue with white bottoms. 25X1
6. [redacted] an airfield on the island; the field was south of the timber quay. [redacted] a large level surface, but no runways or buildings. Clouds of dust arose when aircraft landed at the field. The aircraft that used the field were green-brown, twin-engined transport planes. 25X1
7. There were several large piles of coal between the seaplane harbor and the oil storage tanks. [redacted] there was a coal mine in the area [redacted] There was a small quay a short distance below the coal piles. 25X1
